A Year of Strength for The Project

"From the beginning, we knew that THE PROJECT was an enormous challenge," said Stanley H. Feldberg, chairman of Beth Israel's capital campaign, at the hospital's 68th annual meeting held in November at the Marriott Hotel in Newton. "Today I am pleased to announce that we have raised more than $11 million toward our goal of $12.3 million in equity financing from the community as part of our overall $81-million building and modernization program. And in these economically unsettled times, it is a tribute to the steadfastness of our community and to its faith in the mission of this hospital that the campaign has gone so well."

Two themes — the unsettled economic times and the commitment of the hospital to achieve its mission — were reiterated throughout the breakfast meeting, chaired by Phillip J. Nexon, and attended by a capacity audience of more than 600 members of the Beth Israel family. A topic referred to several times was Chapter 372, a state-mandated system of prospective payment designed to cut health care costs through placing tight constraints on the finances and activities of hospitals. "Unfortunately, most of these new laws and regulations tend simply to be restrictive; they do not work to improve the existing systems of delivery of care or their basic funding mechanisms," said Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of the hospital.

Keynote speaker Dr. J. Robert Buchanan, general director of Massachusetts General Hospital, noted that Beth Israel and its peer institutions are ready to face these challenges. "At this very moment," he noted, "there is serious consideration not only to limit the capital expenditures of hospitals but also to curtail further their operating budgets. As citizens of this state with a commitment to Beth Israel, you need to be concerned about how this new health care environment is likely to affect the future of your institution and this state's ability to attract the top talent in the nation. It is increasingly clear in the face of a rapidly aging population that will require more than average use of expensive health care, a failing Medicare trust fund, and a national debt which continues to grow in spite of a conservative administration, that the federal government can no longer realistically be looked to as a source of required capital. Accordingly, institutions are aggressively exploring innovative and creative funding schemes."

Dr. Rabkin reported that despite the fiscal environment of the times, Beth Israel emerged in the black from its first year under Chapter 372. "Thanks to effective management by both hospital administrators and clinical chiefs, Beth Israel halved the rate of inflation of its operating costs," he announced, "and at a time when National Institutes of Health research funding has been held at constant dollars, Beth Israel's support has grown by 25 per cent last year, and another 25 per cent this year."

And plans to develop new funding sources are underway "with hopes ultimately to develop a modest excess of revenue over expenses, an asset which may then be directed to Beth Israel to help support our basic missions of scholarship and charity."

THE PROJECT, this decade's effort to modernize the hospital, is moving ahead on schedule and on budget, reported Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the board of trustees. The hospital was able to refinance a major portion of its $81-million bond issue, thus saving the hospital and community an estimated $30 million in interest costs over the life of the issue. The succcessful placement of the Series C bond issue, points up the fact that "success of the nonprofit teaching hospital depends upon the extent to which we are able to become — not businesses — but business*like,*" he said, "and here is an area in which Beth Israel need not take a back seat to anyone."

The Charles A. Dana Research Building, the first building component of THE PROJECT, was dedicated last year. The ground-level extension of the Libby Building is now complete and houses the hospital's enlarged computer medicine laboratory. The Reisman and Northeast Buildings are visibly progressing. Both are slated for occupancy in the spring of 1984.

Dr. Buchanan closed the meeting by stating, "the aggregate of the Harvard Medical School facilities which employ approximately 27,000 people and spend essentially $1.3 billion per annum contribute largely to the economic welfare of Massachusetts and the city of Boston. At the same time, the creativity, the energy, the intelligence, and the compassion invested in the mission of our institutions enhance the quality of life not only for Boston, but for the nation and indeed for mankind at large."

Excerpts From Remarks by J. Robert Buchanan, MD Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 13, 1983

"I would like to emphasize the increasing importance of advocacy in behalf of institutions like Beth Israel"

I would like to emphasize the increasing importance of advocacy in behalf of institutions like Beth Israel. Advocacy is a function which requires a comprehensive understanding of the issues, a spiritual identification with them, a conviction and a willingness to speak out in their support. Beth Israel along with its sister institutions are local, familiar examples of a rare, endangered species whose vigor must be maintained if their contributions to our local and national communities are to be continued and if the investments past generations have made in their creativeness is to be protected and maintained.

There is no argument that such institutions are expensive, yet they represent a relatively small part of the total United States expenditures for health care. In spite of this, these institutions come in for a greater-than-deserved share of criticism and regulation.

Here in the Commonwealth, we have seen a coalition of forces including business, the insurance industry, government, and labor impose rigid limits on hospital expenditures and revenues. This impressive coalition of forces came together because each category of interest had reached the conclusion that our costs were no longer affordable. But let's look at the contributions each of the parties to the coalition had made to the rapid growth in our costs. Business more than any other group is responsible for the health care costs associated with the extraordinarily generous insurance packages the average American worker receives today. For years business representatives did not take seriously the negotiation of health care benefits because they were focused on the wage and salary issues exclusively. As businesses faced the recent recession and recognized the dwindling of their own bottom-line surpluses, we heard criticisms galore of the management of our health care provider institutions.

It is not my intent to place all the blame for the current crisis in health care costs on business and industry. On the other hand I would like business to recognize that it has been a major contributor to the problem and that instead of flogging the hospitals it should get about the unpleasant task of redefining benefit packages if it wants to bring the situation under control. Many in the hospital and university world have already announced such changes.

Honored Doctors

At the annual meeting, the hospital paid tribute to 36 physicians and dentists celebrating significant milestones of service. Each honoree was presented a certificate expressing gratitude for contributing to the quality of medical care at Beth Israel over the years.

Similarly, the insurance companies have watched their reserves dwindle and their premiums go up so high that many purchasers are now complaining vigorously. On the other hand, they have been eager to continue to expand the package of benefits that they market to their major corporate clients, and there has been a palpable hesitancy to refuse the incorporation of expensive procedures such as liver and heart transplants.

Labor has been another important stimulus to the enhanced demand for health care services. Only very recently, during a severe recession, have some workers reluctantly accepted co-insurance and co-payment features as a means of reducing the health insurance cost burden of major employer groups.

All of you know that about a year ago a new piece of cost containment legislation was implemented here in the Commonwealth. The response of institutions like Beth Israel and her peer institutions in the Harvard family has been one of serious commitment to make the new program work, and, indeed, it has. The figures indicate that hospital costs in the Commonwealth in the last fiscal year went up substantially less than those in the nation as a whole.

Beth Israel is great, as is Harvard, because it has existed in an environment which has been attractive to the top professional talent in the country. If we lose that, we will have lost one of the state's most valuable attributes. At the same time, the creativity, the energy, the intelligence, and the compassion invested in the mission of our institutions enhances the quality of life not only for Boston and Massachusetts but for the nation and indeed for mankind at large. I suggest to you, that you should each commit to better understanding the problems which are so glibly discussed in the press and which promise to influence so profoundly the future of your beloved institution. I urge this not simply in a selfish vein, but because I am personally convinced that our hospitals are in no way parasitic but are in fact major contributors to the Commonwealth. Indeed, they have been and are enormously responsive to needs at the level of the nation, the state, the community, and the individual. I hope you share this appraisal of our great teaching hospitals and that through your vigorous, informed advocacy you can help us turn the public opinion which today looks upon us so critically into a public view which sees us as the necessary and benevolent institutions we are.

Excerpts From Remarks by Mitchell T. Rabkin, MD Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 13, 1983

"We must continue to lead the way"

The story of the year, of course, was cost control under Chapter 372, the Massachusetts law under which we halved the rate of inflation of our operating costs, thanks to effective management by both hospital administration and clinical chiefs. In one sense, our sound management may have created a public relations problem — as we surface in the black from the first year of Chapter 372, some of the public assumes we must have had a lot of "fat" that could be shed without regret, rather than appreciating that good results can also come from a tight operation with effective management planning and control, devoted hard work by our employees, and some agonizing choices that led to the elimination of expenditures for programs and people that we would have preferred to keep.

The year ahead will see even greater stress on our finances and our activities, as a result of Chapter 372, the forging of a new and tougher contract with Massachusetts Blue Cross, and new federal legislation on Medicare. Unfortunately, most of these new laws and regulations tend simply to be restrictive; they do not work to improve existing systems of delivery of care or their basic financing mechanisms. Now, Beth Israel is encouraging an effort to deal with a large systems issue. The basic missions of Beth Israel include scholarship and the care of the poor. In today's environment of restrictive funding, such activities are poorly supported, and the future augurs even worse times ahead. Something has to be done, for a Beth Israel Hospital without scholarship, without charity, is not the hospital we know and work for. New funding sources must be found. But since the hospital is full, what new activities are taken on cannot stress further the demand for beds, nor compete with our own medical staff.

The teaching hospital until recently has been concerned essentially only with what goes on within its own walls. But the world is changing — not only in the bioscience of medicine, but in the economics and the sociology of care as well. If we want to remain a charity under our own roof, we must somehow become more of a business abroad. If Beth Israel is to continue a world-class figure in American medicine, we shall have to do even more than move with the times; we must continue to lead the way. Fortunately we have an outstanding staff of clinicians and administrators, a superb board of trustees, and a concerned and supportive community. The philosopher Alfred North Whitehead wrote, "Ideas won't keep; something must be done about them." Together we face a future of stress and opportunity. Together we must plan and then act to meet those challenges.

Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, and Phillip J. Nexon (right), chairman of the annual meeting, presented Rabbi Dr. Hyman R. Friedman (center) a special gift at the 68th annual meeting. Rabbi Friedman retired from the chaplaincy at Beth Israel at the end of December 1983.

In Memoriam

During the past year Beth Israel lost several friends and colleagues whose passing the hospital mourned at the annual meeting. Said Chairman Phillip J. Nexon, "They gave much of themselves to us personally and professionally. Although we are saddened by their loss, the memories of their friendship and of their contributions to our hospital are alive and with us today. Their good deeds stand as their enduring monuments." They are:

Dr. Harold Bengloff, Dr. Caroline Dilmaghani, Dr. Robert F. Dine, Dr. Lawrence Saxon, and Dr. Robert Slater, all of the medical staff; Dr. Eliot Zigelbaum, of the dental staff; Max L. Feinberg, David Kane, and Bernard L. Landers, honorary trustees; and Charles Day, Rita Morrow, Paul Streeter, and Adele Zysman, employees.

Excerpts From Remarks by Eliot I. Snider, Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 13, 1983

"Doing a fine job in good spirit"

During this year, the stock market has discovered companies that would like money to fulfill their dreams of medical discovery. Hospitals and other health care institutions run for profit have mushroomed, merged, bought others, and grown all over the place. Surgicenters, emergicenters, walk-in clinics, HMOs, PPOs have appeared and multiplied like rabbits. This sweeping tide came close when a for-profit hospital chain almost purchased the leading not-for-profit psychiatric hospital in the Boston area. But it didn't happen.

How should we at the Beth Israel interpret these dramatic changes going on around us? We are now working in a highly regulated industry. It started with control over any important expenditure for new hospital facilities or equipment. A certificate of need was required. In the last year, the old system of cost-plus payments has been dramatically reversed by a new law in Massachusetts that says this is your maximum allowable cost and that's what you get, period. This is rapidly becoming a national system of price control. The government is helping itself to a larger discount on the bills it has to pay. And other payers would like to do the same. It's easy enough to understand that everyone who is paying the bills for medical insurance is rebelling. They are too high. But we have not dealt with the questions of more diseases, better diagnostic techniques, more medicines and equipment that cure better and faster, and more older people who require larger amounts of health care. The hospital is where these countercurrents meet. We all want the sick to be cared for, but we all want the bill to be smaller.

As a major not-for-profit teaching hospital, how should we react to the growth of for-profit health institutions? They are certainly a challenge and a test. They have claimed that they provide health care at less cost through great management skill, large scale economies, and keen competition. Recently it has been suggested in The New England Journal of Medicine that their profitability may not be because of sharper management but may have something to do with charging more for certain services, selecting out what they would prefer not to do because it is costly and perhaps not offering some of the free care to which our society has become accustomed. Whatever the answers are will become clearer in time.

But for now our success as a nonprofit teaching hospital depends on the extent to which we can manage our hospital in a businesslike, efficient manner. Here I am proud to say that Beth Israel is doing an outstanding job. Our president, Dr. Rabkin, has built around him a team of skilled managers with remarkable ability. The spirit and morale at Beth Israel are good. The financial planning and budgeting works. The computer system works. And the doctors, nurses, and operating staff do their work with skill, efficiency, and above all, compassion and interest in the patient. We are a successful, businesslike hospital offering the best in health care available anywhere and finishing the year with a black bottom line.

It feels good to see the great positive influence that our large group of active and involved trustees exert by supplying business orientation and judgement to our hard-working medical professionals. Business has a tremendous stake in health care. It is business that is paying most of the bill. The least business can expect is that we run our hospital in the best possible way. I believe our doctors and staff have received this message, understand it, and are acting to carry it out. We can be proud of them.

It has not been an easy period. The world around us is shifting very fast. Medicine is changing rapidly both technically and financially. We are fortunate indeed to have such a superb president, together with a wonderful group of trustees, administrators, managers, nurses, and doctors. I have been spending a lot of time in the hospital in many areas. I have not seen or heard a single grouch. They are individually and collectively doing a fine job in good spirit and with good cooperation. It is a rewarding experience for me to be working with them and with you.

RELMAN IS THURMAN LECTURER

Dr. Arnold S. Relman, editor of The New England Journal of Medicine, was the guest lecturer at Beth Israel's ninth annual Dr. Aaron Thurman Lecture. His topic was "Health Care: Business or Profession — Does it Matter?"

The Thurman Lecture was established in 1975 by the family of the late Dr. Aaron Thurman, who was one of the first surgeons associated with Beth Israel. Traditionally on the subject of medical ethics, the lecture is part of the hospital's Seminars in Medicine.

RYAN IS BULIAN LECTURER

Dr. Kenneth J. Ryan, chief of obstetrics-gynecology at the Brigham and Women's Hospital, was guest lecturer at Beth Israel's second annual Dr. Max J. Bulian Memorial Lecture. His topic was "Moral Sense, Pragmatism, and Medical Ethics."

Dr. Bulian was a prominent member of the obstetrics-gynecology staff at Beth Israel, and in 1981 an outpouring of gifts in his memory enabled the hospital and department to establish the Dr. Max J. Bulian Memorial Lecture Fund.

Excerpts From Remarks by Stanley H. Feldberg Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 13, 1983

"Beth Israel's vigor must be maintained"

It has been our challenge to raise $12.3 million in equity financing from the community as part of our overall $81-million building and modernization program which we all know as THE PROJECT.

As has always been the case at Beth Israel, the active support of our community is crucial to any major undertaking of the hospital, and in these economically unsettled times, it is a tribute to the steadfastness of that community, and its faith in the mission of the hospital, that the campaign has gone so well.

Today I am pleased to report that we have raised more than $11 million of our goal.

There is no adequate way to thank all of those who have been responsible for this encouraging news, and for the entire conduct of the campaign, or rather the several campaigns that ran on parallel tracks. Let me just try to make some key acknowledgments of people and groups of people who simply shouldn't go unmentioned.

First of all, my heartfelt thanks to my colleagues, who have helped to chart the course of this campaign: Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the trustee campaign; George Katz, chairman of the leadership campaign; and Frank Morse, chairman of the pacesetter campaign. Gentlemen, the entire community is grateful!

The physician's campaign has been marvelously successful in this, its first year, and we are deeply indebted to the medical staff and to doctors Harris Yett, Ron Weintraub, Ted Steinman, and their colleagues. They are truly dedicated members of our BI family.

The professional staff, led by Dr. Rabkin, has been enormously effective in supporting our campaign. I call particular attention to Helaine Miller, vice president for development, and her staff with whom I have had the good fortune to work closely through the campaign.

A major "coup" during the development of THE PROJECT was the successful refinancing of our Series B bond issue to Series C, which will result in a $30-million saving in interest payments over the next three decades.

What this means is — on the one hand — we have asked the community to contribute $12.3 million, and on the other, we have acted to save the public $30 million in payments for care. That's not a bad deal for the community. In fact, that refinancing accomplishment is still the talk of the finance world and is a tribute to the fiscal astuteness of Eliot I. Snider and his trustee associates, and of course to Gene Wallace and Rodger Daniels on the professional staff.

It must be recorded that none of this would have been accomplished without the remarkable and heartwarming support of a concerned community. Beth Israel has often been referred to as the flagship of the Jewish community of greater Boston. It is the devoted members of that community who put us where we are today, and who will help keep us there as we move toward the 21st century.

SELZER IS SIDEL LECTURER

Prominent surgeon and author Dr. Richard A. Selzer (right) was the guest speaker at the 15th annual Dr. Nathan Sidel Lecture at Beth Israel Hospital. "The Surgeon as Poet" was the topic of Dr. Selzer's talk.

The annual lecture, traditionally on the art of medicine, honors Dr. Nathan Sidel (left), consultant in medicine at Beth Israel. Dr. Sidel died in November of last year.

Clifford Honored for Nursing Leadership

Joyce C. Clifford, RN, vice president for nursing and nurse-in-chief at Beth Israel, received the 1983 Dorothy Garrigus Adams Award for Fostering High Professional Standards in Nursing from Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society of nursing.

Clifford was presented the award during a gala celebration at the Westin Hotel in Copley Place saluting "Ten Years of Progress in Professional Nursing Practice" at this Harvard teaching hospital. The event preceded a two-day national conference designed to focus on creating a climate in health care for professional nursing practice.

Beth Israel is internationally recognized as a leader in primary nursing and was among the first hospitals in the United States to implement this program throughout the institution. Under primary nursing, a nurse assumes full responsibility for the 24-hour nursing care program of three to five patients rather than the traditional approach of sharing responsibility for the care of many patients.

The New York Times Magazine and The Boston Globe both ran major stories on primary nursing at Beth Israel. The New York Times Magazine story won the American Academy of Nursing's 1983 award for a newspaper/magazine article with a positive nonfiction portrayal of nurses and nursing, and an award for excellence in journalism from Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society of nursing.

Clifford, who joined Beth Israel 10 years ago, has established, maintained, and continues to develop an organizational system which provides professional nurses with opportunities for career development and recognition for advancement in their areas of practice. She is recognized internationally as an innovator in the professionalization of the nursing field.

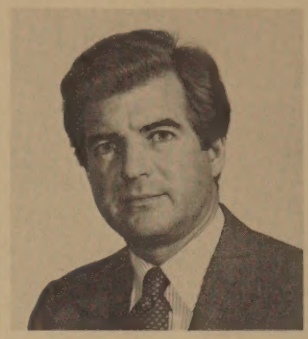
Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president, and Joyce C. Clifford, RN, vice president for nursing and nurse-in-chief, recipient of 1983 Dorothy Garrigus Adams Award for Fostering High Professional Standards in Nursing

A member of Alpha Chi Chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, she served on the National Task Force on Education for Nursing Practice for the American Nurses Association and was President of the American Society for Nursing Service Administration. She is a fellow in the American Academy of Nursing.

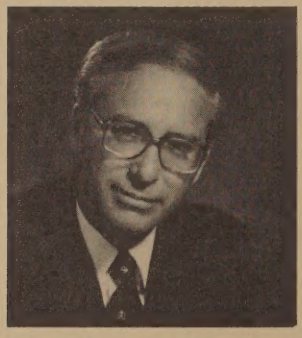
New Trustees of Beth Israel Hospital

The Beth Israel Hospital Association elected nine new members to its board of trustees at the 68th annual meeting.

C. Gerard Drucker is president of Atlas Capital Corporation and vice president of Atlantic Corporation. A real estate developer and commercial financier, Drucker comes to the hospital with a particular interest in operations investments. He is a graduate of Brandeis University (BA) and Northeastern University (MBA), and also studied at the Boston Latin School. His involvement in the business community includes the International Council of Shopping Centers, the National Association of Small Business Investment Companies, and the National Commercial Finance Conference. Drucker has been active in community organizations, serving as president of Brookline Hospital, trustee at the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged, and trustee of Temple Emanuel. He is a fellow of Brandeis University. Drucker and his wife, Marjorie, Newton residents, are parents of William,Carolyn, Michael, and Jeffrey.



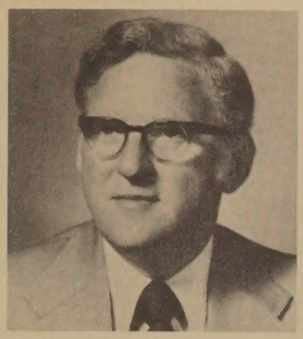
Mark R. Goldweitz is chairman of Goldweitz and Company, a real estate and development corporation and president of South End Mortgage Investors Corporations. Goldweitz was graduated from Harvard University (AB, MBA). He has served the business community as a member of the Greater Boston Real Estate Association and the Rental Housing Association and as a real estate member of the City of Boston's Rent Equity Board. Active in community organizations including the Children's Museum, Combined Jewish Philanthropies, the Fund for the Arts, Solomon Schecter Day School, and the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, he is also a trustee of the New England Aquarium and vice chairman of the Boston Ballet. Goldweitz and his wife, Jill, Boston residents, are the parents of Daniel and David.



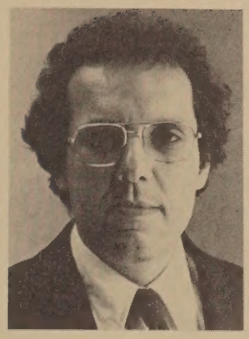
Roger A. Saunders is chairman and chief executive officer of Saunders Hotels Company, Inc., a hotel management company operating the The Boston Park Plaza Hotel and The Plaza Towers, The Lenox Hotel, and The Copley Square Hotel. Saunders was graduated from Miami University (BA). He has served the community as hotel division chairman for the Heart Fund, United Fund and Easter Seal Campaigns; chairman of labor negotiations for 12 Greater Boston hotels; chairman of the New England Hotel and Restaurant Show; chairman of the Governor's Advisory Council on Tourism; and numerous past presidencies and directorships of various hotel associations. He and his wife, Nina, Brookline residents, are the parents of Gary, Jeffrey, Todd, and Tedd.

Maurice Segall is president and chief executive officer of Zayre Corporation. Segall also serves as a director of the Shawmut Corporation, the New England Telephone Company, and the Massachusetts Business Roundtable. A graduate of McGill University (BA) and Columbia University (MA), Segall also studied at the London School of Economics. He has been active in the state and city communities, serving as director of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, chairman for the Retail Merchandising Industry, committee member of the United States Industrial Payroll Savings, member of the Commercial Club of Boston, trustee of the American Repertory Theatre, chairman of the Junior Achievement advisory board, and member of the Retailing Advisory Committee at Simmons College. Segall and his wife, Sarah, Brookline residents, are the parents of Elizabeth, Eric, and Peter.

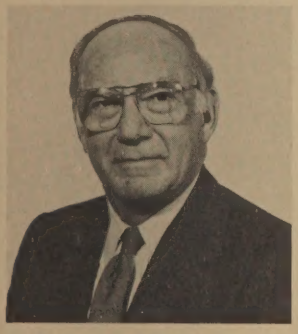
Charles B. Housen, president of Erving Paper Mills, served on the buildings and grounds committee at Beth Israel before becoming a trustee. He is a graduate of the Loomis Institute, Windsor, Connecticut, and Tufts University (AB). Housen also studied at Boston University Law School and Western New England Law School. Active in community organizations, he is a member of the Massachusetts Governor's Advisory Committee for Economic Development and has served on the Industry Sector Advisory Committee of the United States Department of Commerce. Housen has served in the business community as director of the American Paper Institute, director of Massachusetts Electric Company, and director of the Advisory Board of Liberty Mutual Insurance Company. He is a member of the New England chapter of the Young Presidents Organization, Inc. He and his wife, Marjorie, are the parents of Deborah of Jeruselem, Phyllis of Boston, and Morris of Pittsburgh.



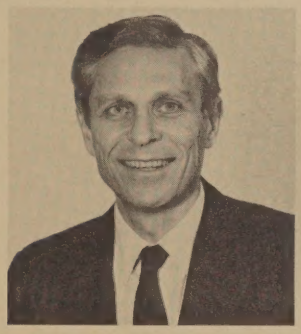
Harvey C. Krentzman is a management consultant, author of Managing For Profits and Successful Management Strategies for Small Business, and professor of small business management at Northeastern University. Krentzman was graduated from Northeastern University (BS) and Harvard University (MBA and MS). He is active in the community as a member of The Corporation at Northeastern University and as vice chairman of the board of overseers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is a former president of Temple Mishkan Tefila in Newton. Krentzman has served the business community as a member of the board of directors of the following companies: Signal Technology Corportation, Label Art Inc., ADCO Publishing Co., Jonese Vining Inc., and Massachusetts Stores Inc. He and his wife, Farla, live in Chestnut Hill and are the parents of Mark Alan and Scott David.



Robert M. Melzer, president of Property Capital Trust, a real estate investment company, served on the finance committee before being named trustee. Melzer was graduated from Cornell University (BA), where he serves as a member of the real estate council, and holds an MBA from Harvard University. He and his wife, Judith, Brookline residents, are the parents of Meredith and Craig.



A. Raymond Tye is president of United Liquors, Ltd. and an honorary trustee of Combined Jewish Philanthropies. He attended Tufts University and served in World War II. Tye has served as a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the board of trustees of the Civic Education Center of Tufts University. He is also past president and chairman of the Wine and Spirits Wholesalers of America. He and his wife, Saunie, reside in Boston and are the parents of James and Michael of Boston, Carol Ann and Mark of Colorado, and Randy Sue of Rhode Island.



Stuart Zerner, an investment banker and stock brokerage partner of Bear Stearns, served on the finance and budget committees before being named a trustee. He is a graduate of Syracuse University where he earned a degree in business administration. Zerner has been active in the community as a member of the New England Council and an associate member of the Massachusetts High Technology Council. He is director of the Massachusetts division of the American Heart Association. Zerner and his wife, Marilyn, live in Weston and are the parents of Paul and Jennifer.

Honorary Trustees

Three of Beth Israel Hospital's trustees were named honorary trustees at the hospital's annual meeting. Rashi Fein, Peter Ulin, and Joseph Weisberg were presented certificates commending each for his "loyal and devoted service as a trustee of the Beth Israel Hospital on the occasion of election as an honorary trustee for life."

BI Family Heralds 21st Century

The officers of Beth Israel's board of trustees hosted a dinner meeting for more than 250 leaders of the community and friends of the hospital at the West Wing of the Museum of Fine Arts in July. More than 70 of the invited guests were new to the Beth Israel family, and the occasion marked the first opportunity for them to learn in person about THE PROJECT, Beth Israel's five-year building and renovation program.

Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the board, opened the meeting, and Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president, presented the case for THE PROJECT, outlining its components and explaining their importance to the hospital. He anticipated that three new buildings, as well as many renovations to older buildings would position Beth Israel in the forefront of health care in the community during the 21st century.

Stanley H. Feldberg, chairman of the capital campaign committee, reported on the fiscal status of THE PROJECT.

Following the program, guests adjourned to a reception and dinner, followed by remarks by guest speaker Dr. Carl Sagan, Pulitzer prize-winning author, host of the public television series Cosmos, and a sometime Beth Israel patient.

HIATT VISITING PROFESSORSHIP ESTABLISHED AT BETH ISRAEL

The Howard H. Hiatt Visiting Professorship of Medicine has been established at Beth Israel Hospital in honor of Dr. Hiatt, who was physician-in-chief at Beth Israel and Herrman L. Blumgart Professor of Medicine at Harvard Medical School from 1963 to 1972.

The first Howard H. Hiatt Visiting Professor of Medicine was Dr. Keith Peters, professor and director of the department of medicine at the Royal Postgraduate Medical School in London. Dr. Peters made daily rounds with house staff and medical students at Beth Israel and spoke on "Auto-Immunity in Nephritis" at Medical Grand Rounds.

The visiting professorship was organized and arranged by Dr. Eugene Braunwald, Beth Israel's physician-in-chief, in recognition of the exceptional effort rendered by Dr. Hiatt in building Beth Israel's department of medicine during his tenure as chairman.

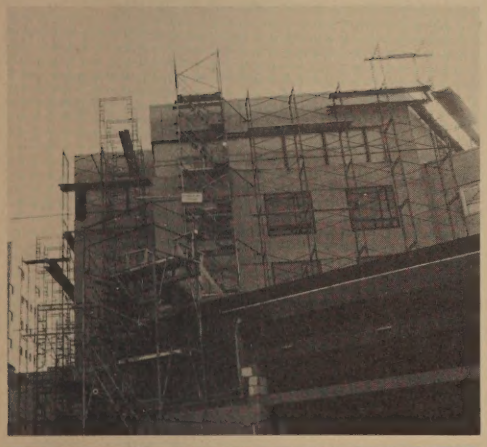
Progress on the Project in Full View

The Reisman Building (center rising), atop the Feldberg Building, is complete and will be furnished and occupied in stages to minimize disruption to hospital staff and patients. Largely similar to the Feldberg patient floors except for the orientation of the nursing station and the color schemes, the Reisman patient floors offer thoughtful patient amenities, efficient design, and magnificent views of the city.

The Northeast Building (below) was made weathertight before winter began in earnest, allowing construction staff to work on the mechanical systems throughout the structure immune to the vagaries of the season. Because the Northeast Building abuts the 1928 Gryzmish Building (lower left), this site presented major architectural and construction challenges.



Paulin Named Stoneman Professor

Dr. Sven Paulin, radiologist-in-chief at Beth Israel, was named the first Miriam H. Stoneman Professor at Harvard Medical School in recognition of his outstanding contributions to the medical school and the hospital.

The chair was created through the generosity of Sidney Stoneman, honorary trustee and past chairman of the board, and his wife, Miriam H. Stoneman, a trustee of the hospital and past president of the Women's Auxiliary.

The Harvard chair is located at Beth Israel, reflecting the Stonemans' interest in service and scholarship in fulfillment of the hospital's responsibilities to Harvard and to the community.

Snider, chairman of the board of trustees at Beth Israel; Dr. Sven Paulin, radiologist-in-chief at Beth Israel and the first Miriam H. Stoneman professor; Sidney Stoneman; Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel; and seated: Miriam H. Stoneman

Among those participating in The Great American Smokeout Day in November at Beth Israel was a longstanding friend of the hospital, Kitty Dukakis (center). The governor's wife took a pulmonary function test at a booth set up by the departments of respiratory therapy and social service to dramatize the fact that she had recently quit smoking and to encourage others to follow suit.

FOUNDERS CLUB CELEBRATES AT THE KENNEDY LIBRARY

The John F. Kennedy Library at dusk provided a dramatic setting for the fourth annual Founders Club dinner, honoring major donors to Beth Israel. Dr. Augustus A. White III orthopedic surgeon-in-chief, presented an informative talk on "Coping With Back Pain."

Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the board of trustees, welcomed the guests. Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of the hospital, and Stanley H. Feldberg, chairman of the capital campaign committee, also addressed the 150 donors and thanked them for their generous support of the hospital.

Beth Israel Giving (BIG) Founders Club members contributed $1,000 or more to the hospital's annual campaign. Contributions to the BIG program are used where the needs of the hospital are greatest.

ASSOCIATES CLUB HOLDS FIRST ANNUAL EVENT

Dr. Norman Geschwind (above), Beth Israel neurologist-in-chief and an internationally renowned scientist, was the featured speaker at the Associates Club lecture and reception. Members of the Associates Club, a new club honoring donors to the Beth Israel Giving (BIG) annual appeal, met for their first annual event.

Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the board of trustees, welcomed the group to the lecture, held in the Trustman Board Meeting Room. Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, introduced Decades, a 12-minute film created from archival footage showing the development of Beth Israel from a community hospital to a major teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Geschwind explained some of his most recent research which suggests that strongly left-handed people are more likely to suffer from certain immune system diseases, migraine headaches, and language-oriented learning disabilities than are right-handed people. On the other hand, "lefties" also seem to have certain other characteristics which compensate for those particular problems.

The evening concluded with a sherry hour in the Grossman Private Dining Room.

BIAC CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

WAYS OF GIVING

"An investment in Beth Israel is a sound investment whose return is better health care for everyone."

Beth Israel depends on the interest and support of a committed and generous community in its effort to deliver the highest quality in patient care, teaching, and research. Among the ways of supporting the hospital are the following:

BETH ISRAEL GIVING (BIG)
Beth Israel Giving (BIG) is the hospital's annual campaign. Funds raised through BIG are used for the general operating expenses of the hospital. Contributions to the annual campaign are unrestricted, and they are used where the needs are the greatest.

There are five donor appreciation clubs:

1. The Century Club is designed to recognize the large and critical group of donors who contribute $100–$249 to BIG. Members of the Century Club are invited to a physician lecture and reception at the hospital and receive a subscription to the BI News, a quarterly publication which keeps donors updated on how their gifts are helping to support patient care and research. Century Club members will be listed in the hospital's Annual Report.

2. The Sponsors Club was formed to honor donors of $250–$499. Benefits of this club include a set of specially designed Beth Israel note cards, a physician lecture and reception at the hospital, subscription to the BI News, and listing of the donor's name in the hospital's Annual Report.

3. The Associates Club honors those important donors who contribute $500–$999 to the annual campaign. Members of the Associates Club receive a complimentary copy of the recently published book, Your Aching Back: A Doctor's Guide to Relief by Dr. Augustus A. White, III, Beth Israel's orthopedic surgeon-in-chief, along with a

About Beth Israel Hospital

Highlights of 1983

• THE PROJECT, Beth Israel's five-year $77.7 million building program for new and renovated facilities moved forward on many fronts in 1983.

—The hospital prerefunded the majority of the series B bonds by marketing a new series C issue. This refinancing will save the hospital and the public $30 million over the life of the issue.

—Gifts to the capital campaign from more than 230 families totaled more than $11.1 million toward the hospital's $12.3-million goal for equity financing.

—The ground-level extension to the Libby Building and the tunnel connecting the Libby Building to the rest of the hospital were completed, and the division of computer medicine moved into the new space in the fall. Trustees and employees had an opportunity to view the new space at open houses in October. The Computer Medicine Laboratory is available for naming.

—The Reisman Building is complete and the space is being furnished and occupied in stages.

—The Northeast Building is complete and also will be furnished and occupied in stages.

• Beth Israel participated in the Fifth Annual Mission Hill Fair, sponsored by the Mission Planning Council; and "Wellbeing for You and Your Family," a health fair sponsored by the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center.

• The Women's Auxiliary sponsored "Event '83—Matinee Musical Theatre" and raised funds toward the new neonatal special care unit. With "Event '84" and other projects, the Auxiliary expects to complete funding for the unit.

• The Men's Associates initiated a program of medical discussions featuring Beth Israel physicians speaking on a variety of health care topics. The discussions are co-sponsored by local temples.

• Beth Israel, in conjunction with other institutions of the Longwood Area Trauma Center (LATC), participated in Emergency Medical Services Week and helped develop an informational display.

• PEP (Patient Entertainment Program), a series of professional performances produced and coordinated by Harriet Altman for an audience of patients, visitors, and hospital staff, is now videotaped and aired daily on Channel 3, Beth Israel's closed-circuit television station.

• Primary nursing at Beth Israel was a focus of attention in both the media and professional nursing societies. The New York Times Magazine and The Boston Globe both ran major stories on primary nursing at Beth Israel, and WGBH-TV Channel 2 aired an hour-long documentary about primary nursing in the neurological unit at the hospital. The Times Magazine story won the 1983 American Academy of Nursing Award for a newspaper/magazine article with a positive nonfiction portrayal of nurses and nursing, and an award for excellence in journalism from Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society of nursing.

—In addition, Joyce C. Clifford, vice president for nursing and nurse-in-chief, received the Dorothy Garrigus Adams Award for Fostering High Professional Standards in Nursing from Sigma Theta Tau.

—In October, the hospital and the Beth Israel family honored Clifford and primary nursing at a banquet which opened a two-day national conference on clinical and administrative structures which create a climate for professional nursing practice in the health care system.

• Beth Israel staff members published papers documenting major advances in biomedical and clinical research:

—An experimental technique for administering insulin by nasal inhalation to people with diabetes could lead to dramatic innovations in insulin therapy for diabetes, reducing the need for insulin injections that many diabetics now require.

—Stress reduces the ability of the body's immune system to fight infection. Furthermore, our personalities and motivations also play a role.

—Research suggests several unexpected predictors of both good and poor outcomes, as well as prognoses of quality of life for survivors of in-hospital cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

—Use of a new drug, milrinone, may revolutionize the treatment of congestive heart failure. This drug is more potent than other available oral agents used to strengthen the heart's action and could even replace digitalis, which has been the drug of choice for heart failure since 1785.

Beth Israel Giving (BIG)

Beth Israel Giving (BIG) is the hospital's annual campaign. Funds raised through BIG are used for the general operating expenses of the hospital. During this fiscal year, September 26, 1982 through September 24, 1983, the individuals and organizations whose names appear below made contributions to the hospital through one of three donor clubs.

Digital Equipment Corporation
General Cinema Corporation
Pfizer, Inc.
Polaroid Foundation, Inc.
Westinghouse Electric Fund

Planned Gifts

Beth Israel's Planned Giving Program offers new opportunities for charitable support. It provides various ways of planned giving which offer immediate benefits to the donor and long-range benefits to both the donor and the hospital.

Planned giving makes it possible for those who might want to help Beth Israel to do so without parting with spendable income. The planned giving options often give donors an increase in immediate tax deduction, an avoidance of capital gains tax, and a possible reduction in costly estate taxes.

Facts About Beth Israel Hospital

Boston's Beth Israel Hospital is a nonprofit institution that provides care for patients of any race, creed, color, or nationality and conducts educational and research activities that promote patient care. Established in 1916 by the Boston Jewish community to meet the needs of the growing immigrant population, Beth Israel moved to its current location in 1928 at which time its affiliation with Harvard Medical School began.

Today Beth Israel has:

☐ 452 adult inpatient beds in medicine, surgery, obstetrics/gynecology, orthopedics, psychiatry, neurosurgery, neuromedicine, and medical and surgical intensive care units. Over 21,000 inpatients receive treatment each year.

☐ 54 bassinets including 12 in a Special Care Nursery (Level II) for nearly 3,800 babies delivered annually.

☐ The 24-hour Berenson Emergency Unit, part of the Longwood Area Trauma Center, with over 32,000 visits annually.

☐ An innovative general medical center for ambulatory care (BI Healthcare Associates) and outpatient specialty units with more than 133,000 visits each year.

☐ A Home Care program providing more than 7,000 visits to homebound, chronically ill patients by nurse practitioners, physicians, or social workers as a team.

Beth Israel Hospital has a tradition of establishing programs that encourage sensitive and personalized care, such as:

☐ Patients' Rights — The hospital was the first to issue a written statement ("The Rights of Patients," 1972) including the rights to be heard and responded to by hospital personnel, to privacy, personal dignity, and respect, and to detailed information. The statement is distributed to each patient admitted and to each new employee.

☐ Primary Nursing — Each patient is assigned a registered nurse who is responsible for developing a 24-hour nursing care plan, looking after the patient while on duty, and monitoring the care while others are on duty. This hospital-wide system allows nurses to give more individual, personalized care.

As a teaching hospital, Beth Israel provides professional training to over 1,200 students each year. The range of learning is wide:

☐ Beth Israel is one of three major teaching facilities for Harvard Medical School where most of its physicians hold faculty appointments.

☐ There are over 230 interns and residents each year in medicine, surgery, pathology, and other medical specialties, as well as postgraduate fellows. Beth Israel has led the country in providing innovative training programs in geriatrics and primary care medicine.

☐ Nursing students from Boston University, Northeastern University, and Boston State College; social work students from Smith College and Simmons College; dietary interns and students in pharmacy, medical technology, physical and occupational therapy, respiratory therapy, and radiologic technology all receive part of their clinical education at Beth Israel.

Research at Beth Israel is supported by grants from private foundations and government agencies.

☐ Biomedical research is conducted at the hospital's Charles A. Dana Research Institute.

☐ Since 1973, the oldest clinical research facility in the country, Harvard's Thorndike Laboratories, has been located at Beth Israel. It is now housed in the hospital's new Charles A. Dana Research Building, completed in 1982.

☐ A Clinical Research Center maintains 10 beds for patients directly involved in scientific study.

☐ Research is conducted in cardiology, endocrinology, nutrition, nephrology, surgery, neurology, and obstetrics.

specially designed Beth Israel leather bookmark. Members are invited to a physician lecture and cocktail party in the spring. In addition, members receive the quarterly BI News and their names will be listed in the hospital's Annual Report.

4. The Founders Club honors the hospital's major annual donors, those who contribute $1,000 or more. Founders Club members are recognized through the following special benefits:

- All members receive a personal invitation to the annual Founders Club Dinner, held each spring at a celebrated Boston location. This dinner features distinguished physicians and key leadership of the BI exploring some of the most exciting medical progress and future research at this renowned Harvard teaching hospital. Also, all members will be listed in the hospital's Annual Report and they will receive quarterly issues of the BI News.
- New Founders Club members receive a Beth Israel Hospital chair embellished with an engraved plaque as well as the Founders Club necktie and silk scarf, each handsomely decorated with the hospital's insignia.
- Sustaining members receive a personally autographed copy of Your Aching Back: A Doctor's Guide to Relief, by Dr. Augustus A. White, III, Beth Israel's orthopedic surgeon-in-chief.

5. The Founders Forum, newly established this year, honors that special group of donors who make a five-year commitment to the Founders Club. At the annual Founders Club Dinner they are presented with specially designed engraved plaques bearing their names. They will also receive all the regular benefits of Founders Club membership as described above.

THE PROJECT — THE CAPITAL CAMPAIGN

THE PROJECT is a five-year building program to create vital facilities needed for the hospital to meet its goals of providing the warmest patient care and the highest quality in medical expertise. The major components of THE PROJECT are:

The Charles A. Dana Research Building — Dedicated in October, 1982, this five-story structure adds laboratory and teaching facilities for the hospital's biomedical research programs and for the world-famous Harvard-Thorndike Laboratory.

The Reisman Building — Named in gratitude for a generous gift, the Reisman Building will be a four-story structure atop the Feldberg Building which will include a new labor and delivery floor, surgical and medical inpatient beds to replace those located in older hospital wings, and intensive care units.

The Northeast Building — Now available for naming, this four-story structure will include an enlarged and renovated Berenson Emergency Unit, a new radiation therapy department, a new and enlarged Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit, and expanded clinical laboratories and medical records library.

These structures, plus additional renovations in existing areas, will make possible a broad range of donor opportunities for naming facilities — from beds to buildings. When a facility is designated, a plaque is affixed to the facility, honoring the generosity of the donor. In addition, capital donors will be listed in the hospital's Annual Report.

To make a tax deductible contribution to Beth Israel at any time during the year or for more information on any of Beth Israel's giving programs, please contact Helaine Miller, vice president for development, at 330 Brookline Avenue, Boston, MA, 02215, or telephone (617) 735-3600.

Volunteers Honored

Over 100 Beth Israel volunteers were honored for their hours and years of dedicated service at the annual Volunteer Recognition and Service Award Brunch, held in the Ullian Dining Area at the hospital.

Deborah Henry, director of volunteer services, addressed the volunteers and spoke about Beth Israel's excellence in health care and its emphasis on respect, compassion, and caring. She noted that the members of the volunteer program extend that compassion and caring as Beth Israel's ambassadors.

Esther L. Feldberg, then president of the Women's Auxiliary, brought greetings from her organization, and Joan B. Mendelsohn, director of the office of community relations, commended the volunteers for their loyal service.

Phillip J. Nexon, first vice chairman of the board of trustees, extended his thanks to all the volunteers as a representative of the board. He remarked, "I feel that we who are volunteers — since board members are also volunteers — owe a vote of thanks to the hospital for giving us the opportunity to do such meaningful work in our lives."

Serving as master of ceremonies was J. Antony Lloyd, vice president for public affairs. For their generous contributions of time and effort, the following volunteers were presented awards:

The dramatic story of heart transplant candidate John Faragi attracted continuing coverage for a week in July in both print and broadcast media. Reporters from The Boston Globe, The Boston Herald, Associated Press, United Press International, television channels 4, 5, 7, and 56 as well as radio stations WEEI, WBZ, WHDH, and WRKO came to Beth Israel to follow the story through press conferences and interviews with Dr. Donald Baim, Beth Israel staff cardiologist responsible for Mr. Faragi's care, and members of the Faragi family.

On the day Mr. Faragi was air-ambulanced to Stanford University Medical Center to await a heart transplant, photographers, journalists, and news crews boarded the Beth Israel bus to join the police-escorted motorcade to Logan Airport. The motorcade was followed live on television by Channel 4's Eyewitness News helicopter.

Dr. Alan Moses (left), and Dr. Jeffrey S. Flier (right), discuss their newly-developed technique for nasal administration of insulin to diabetics at a press conference in the Grossman Conference Center at Beth Israel.

The story was reported in both local and national newspapers and by both major wire services. National television programs including NBC's Today show, NBC Nightly News, and CBS Evening News covered the announcement. In addition, national and international radio networks, local television channels 2, 4, 5, and 7, and local radio station WEEI reported the story.

A Primary Documentary

The camera zooms in on a nurse reading quietly to a patient whose head is swathed in bandages. When she is finished reading, the nurse puts the book aside, picks up her patient's hands and holds them gently. She bends her head to the patient. The sound engineer brings his microphone in close to catch the quiet conversation between the two women — comforting words from nurse to patient.

Satisfied with the film he has shot, the cameraman leaves the room with his soundman. But the nurse stays — talking, stroking her patient's arms, holding her hands. She is not an actress on a film set, but a real nurse in a real hospital, Boston's Beth Israel. The nurse and the patient are part of a documentary on primary nursing, Beth Israel's professional nursing practice which promotes one-to-one patient care.

The man behind the camera is Richard Kahn, an independent filmmaker. His current film, shot entirely on Gryzmish 7 (7 North, a medical and surgical neurology floor) gives Kahn an environment which allows him to explore interactions between nurses and patients in a dramatic but real-life setting.

Kahn became interested in creating a documentary at Beth Israel over a year ago, a logical extension of his previous work which documents human beings in unexpected and difficult situations. His most recent film, Seventeen Years in Prison: A Portrait of Jerry Sousa, studied the life of a man who had spent nine years in solitary confinement, and an earlier film, A New Beginning, focused on patients in a spinal-cord injury unit at University Hospital in Boston.

Kahn believes that a film about primary nursing at Beth Israel can explore different ideas about how people cope with life in the face of illness. He believes that it is the people with whom you are intimate that add meaning and dimension to life. At Beth Israel, the primary nursing system fosters a particularly close, caring relationship between nurse and patient.

In addition to wanting to focus on the patients' experiences of illness and health, Kahn wanted to study the nurses in his film. "Their challenge, as I see it," he explains, "is to care about people and to be professionals. Beth Israel's system of primary nursing allows nurses to do that by encouraging them to become involved with their patients emotionally while caring for their physical needs as well."

To understand the nurses and their work, Kahn spent almost 500 hours in the unit over a period of six months before shooting any videotape. This unusual approach allowed Kahn to learn how the nurses think and how they react to the pressures and pleasures of their jobs.

The nurses, in turn, came to accept and trust Kahn, and to become, in his words, "co-producers" of the program on which they began to collaborate.

Nancy Rumplik, RN, talks about Kahn's approach: "It was very strange at first, to have someone following you around on your job, watching everything you usually do without thinking about it. But Richard has a special talent for making people comfortable with him, and in time I think all of us came to trust him implicitly."

"Richard never interfered," she continues, "and eventually we began to share in the enormous responsibility of getting the film to reflect what life is like for both patients and nurses on 7 North." For Rumplik, an unexpected and rewarding aspect of the experience was that "the film elicited new feelings for me about myself and my job as a primary nurse. Seeing myself with my patients was a powerful reminder of how glad I am that I can help and that the primary nursing system here at BI lets me work with patients in this very special way."

The program, entitled 7 North, aired on WGBH-TV in Boston (Channel 2) in December.

BI Establishes In Vitro Fertilization Program

Beth Israel Hospital has recently established an in vitro fertilization (IVF) program to help infertile couples have children. The program has already suceeded in achieving pregnancies in previously infertile women.

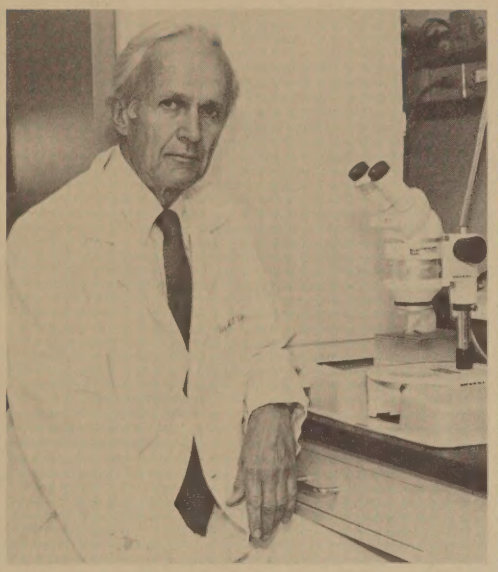
Dr. Melvin Taymor, chief of the division of reproductive endocrinology and infertility said, "We are very pleased that our rates of achieving pregnancy are among the best in the country and better than those at many leading medical centers. Furthermore, we expect this rate will increase as techniques improve."

Since the birth of Louise Brown in England in 1978, in vitro clinics have opened worldwide, and over 400 "test-tube" babies have been born.

Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston also has established an IVF program similar to that at Beth Israel, and other IVF centers have opened in the Greater Boston area.

In vitro fertilization has proven particularly effective in achieving pregnancy in women with damaged or missing Fallopian tubes. Severe endometriosis, poor semen quality, and unexplained infertility may also be indications for IVF therapy.

The procedure involves removing one, two, or three eggs from the woman's ovaries and placing them in a solution along with sperm from the woman's husband. Eggs fertlilized by the sperm are then inserted in the uterus. If the resulting embryo implants in the uterine wall, it can develop to term and be delivered by conventional methods.



Dr. Melvin Taymor, chief of the division of reproductive endocrinology and infertility at Beth Israel

Beth Israel's program is for therapeutic IVF, not for research purposes. All fertilized eggs will be implanted in the uterus. Only married couples with a history of infertility for two years will be acceptable as candidates for the procedure.

Appropriate medical committees and legal counsel for the hospital have reviewed and approved the program plans.

Although the procedure appears to be simple, Dr. Taymor explains that IVF will not necessarily work for everyone since infertility is not always caused by problems in the female reproductive system.

Yet for those couples for whom it might work, IVF represents a new wave of hope.

Dr. Margot S. Kruskall Receives Stone Award

Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard Medical School have announced that Dr. Margot S. Kruskall, medical director of the Schwartz Blood Bank and a member of the departments of pathology and medicine at Beth Israel, is the recipient of the 1983 S. Robert Stone Award for Teaching. This award was established in 1981 in honor of Beth Israel's former board chairman and honorary trustee S. Robert Stone by his children, S. Robert Stone, Jr., Richard D. Stone, and Marcia Riesman.

The award, presented by Harvard Medical School Dean Daniel C. Tosteson, was established to honor a doctor on the Beth Israel Hospital staff who is also a member of the Harvard Medical School faculty and whom the dean determines to be an outstanding teacher of medical students.

Dr. Kruskall is a lecturer and section leader for the Harvard Medical School's hematology block of pathophysiology.

Dr. Kruskall was cited in one of the letters placing her in nomination as "...an excellent teacher, extremely responsive to students' interests and needs, with an infectious enthusiasm for hematology." A selection committee, chaired by Dean for Academic Affairs S. James Adelstein, MD, with representatives from the medical school and the house staff and senior faculty at Beth Israel, solicited nominations from Harvard Medical School students and Beth Israel physicians and made its choice from among the 29 individuals so nominated.

Dr. Margot S. Kruskall (center), recipient of the S. Robert Stone Award for Teaching, is congratulated here by: (from left) Dean Daniel C. Tosteson; Dr. Eugene Braunwald, physician-in-chief and Herrman Ludwig Blumgart professor of medicine; S. Robert Stone; Dr. Harold F. Dvorak, pathologist-in-chief and Mallinckrodt professor; and Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel Hospital.

CHANUKAH CELEBRATED AT BETH ISRAEL

The Maimonides Day School High School Choral Group entertained patients at Beth Israel's annual Chanukah party after hospital chaplain Rabbi Dr. Hyman R. Friedman explained the significance of the festival and lit the traditional candles. Mrs. Kaye Albert of Winthrop sang a medley of popular Hebrew and Yiddish songs and accompanied the group on the piano. Rabbi David Shapiro, principal of Maimonides, also attended the party, which was held in the hospital's Rosenfield Admitting Area.

Mrs. Navon visits Beth Israel: Mrs. Ophira Navon, wife of former Israeli president Yitzhak Navon, speaks with Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, during a tour of the hospital.

Boston was one of several United States cities Mrs. Navon and her husband visited.

Promotions at Beth Israel

Beth Israel Hospital has announced that several members of its senior management team have been named vice presidents of the hospital.

In making the announcement, Beth Israel President Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin said, "As the hospital interacts more and more with business, governmental, and political spheres, it becomes useful for our top administrative team to be identified by titles which, in conventional business terms, indicate the significant responsibilities which these individuals carry."

The new designations are:
Laura Avakian, who has been the director of the division of human resources at Beth Israel since 1980 was named vice president for human resources.

Sandra L. Fenwick, previously an associate director of the hospital, was appointed vice president for clinical services and deputy director.

Edward P. Kellar, who came to Beth Israel from the Gillette Company, was named vice president for information resource management.

J. Antony Lloyd, director of the public affairs division for the past five years, was named vice president for public affairs.

Helaine Miller was named vice president for development, after having served as director of development at Beth Israel since 1979.

Francis J. Sullivan, who has been at Beth Israel since 1962, was appointed vice president for facilities planning and engineering.

Eugene C. Wallace, formerly director of fiscal services, was appointed vice president for finance.

Two other titles have been modified:
Joyce Clifford, RN, was named vice president for nursing, and nurse-in-chief.

Rodger L. Daniels was named vice president for financial planning and issues management.

Dr. Rabkin remarked, "Mrs. Clifford's designation as nurse-in-chief reflects appreciation of those parallels in her role to the clinical responsibilities of the clinical chiefs in medicine, surgery, and other specialties."

He continued, "Mr. Daniels retains his breadth of responsibilities such as the roles of treasurer, internal auditor, and financial planner. The designation of 'issues management' recognizes further the intensive analysis of major environmental influences and major opportunities required for the hospital to plan soundly and act prudently."

David Dolins retains the title of executive vice president and director.

Trish Gibbons, RN, MS, has been appointed administrative director of nursing, after returning to Beth Israel from an eight-month leave to pursue doctoral study in nursing administration at Boston University. Gibbons assumed a key nursing position ten years ago, when she led the team responsible for establishing primary nursing as the practice model at Beth Israel. She then served as director of medical nursing for nine years.

Gibbons is a member of both the Massachusetts and the American Societies of Nursing Service Administrators.

Priscilla S. Dasse, RN, has been promoted from director of quality assurance at Beth Israel to assistant director of the hospital. Dasse's new areas of responsibility include quality assurance, risk management, utilization review, anesthesia, surgery, orthopedics, medical records, and social service.

Dasse started working at Beth Israel in 1974 as a nurse epidemiologist and became director of quality assurance and risk management in 1981. She previously was a naval lieutenant and served as emergency room charge nurse at Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego, California. Dasse has had published numerous papers about infection control.

Malcolm H. Weiner, formerly assistant director, has been appointed senior assistant director of Beth Israel. As senior assistant director, Weiner oversees the areas of radiology, medicine, neurology, psychiatry, the medical library, radiation therapy, physical medicine, communication services, the clinical laboratories, pharmacy, and admitting.

Weiner, who earned his master's degree in business administration in health care and his bachelor's degree in business administration from Northeastern University, came to Beth Israel in 1976 as administrative director of the department of radiology and treasurer of the Beth Israel Hospital Radiologic Foundation, Inc. He was appointed an assistant director of the hospital in 1980.

The main entrance of Beth Israel Hospital leads to the newly completed Reisman Building (center), atop the Feldberg Building.

Staff Activities

Ann V. Als, MD, radiology, has been elected fellow of the Council on Cardiovascular Radiology for the American Heart Association.

Kenneth A. Arndt, MD, dermatologist-in-chief, was elected to the Faculty Council of Harvard Medical School for a three-year term. It is the third term he has been elected to serve on the council since it was established in 1975.

Dr. Arndt also has been elected board member of the American Society for Lasers in Medicine and Surgery.

Peter A. Banks, MD, medicine, co-edited The Crohn's Disease and Ulcerative Colitis Fact Book (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York) under the auspices of the National Patient Education Committee of the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis of which he is chairman. Other contributors to the book included James M. Rabb, MD, and Benjamin M. Banks, MD, both of medicine.

Laura Avakian, MA, vice president for human resources, presented the topic "Employee Assistance Programs Are Good Business" at the Southeast Regional Conference of the American Society of Hospital Personnel Administrators.

Ellen L. Bassuk, MD, psychiatry, co-edited Behavioral Emergencies: A Field Guide for EMTs and Paramedics and an accompanying Instructor's Manual (both Little, Brown). Dr. Bassuk published the second edition of The Practitioner's Guide to Psychoactive Drugs with Stephen C. Schoonover, MD, psychiatry, and Alan Gelenberg, MD, (Plenum Press).

Martin C. Berezin, MD, psychiatry, contributed a chapter in the book Depression and Aging (Skimger).

Emanuel Berger, MA, human resources, and Susan Levin published "A Game Worth Playing: The New Training Department" in Training News.

Marjorie Boldt, RN, and Julianne Sambir Hirsch, RN, MS, nursing, published Acute Coronary Care (Fleschner).

Eugene Braunwald, MD, chairman of the consolidated department of medicine at Beth Israel and Brigham and Women's Hospitals, has been appointed chairman and principal investigator of the steering committee of the national trial on thrombolysis in myocardial infarctions supported by the National Institutes of Health.

Louis Burke, MD, obstetrics and gynecology, was installed as president of the American Society for Colposcopy and Cervical Pathology.

Philip Y. Cannon, DDS, chief of the dental unit, presented "Hospital Dentistry in the USA" in Peking and Xian, China to the Ministry of Railroad Hospital, China's principal hospital.

Joyce C. Clifford, RN, FAAN, vice president for nursing and nurse-in-chief, and Thomas Delbanco, MD, director of the division of general medicine and primary care, were among four overseas guests invited as experts in their fields to attend the ninth International Seminar of the Life Planning Center in Tokyo, Japan. The seminar was entitled "Science and Art in Medicine and Nursing (II) — Total Care of the Patient and Family."

Clifford was recently elected to the board of trustees of St. Anselm College.

Albert M. Galaburda, MD, neurology, has been awarded the 1983 Pattison Prize for Neuroscience. Dr. Galaburda is honored for his joint discovery of the Kemper-Galaburda anomaly, an abnormality in the left hemisphere (the center of language control) in the dyslexic individual's brain. He shares the award with Thomas L. Kemper, MD, of Boston University School of Medicine.

Nanette Gartrell, MD, psychiatry, published "Gay Patients in the Medical Setting" in Treatment Interventions in Human Sexuality (Plenum Press).

Norman Geschwind, MD, neurologist-in-chief, and Marek-Marsel Mesulam, MD, neurology, presented the course "The Neurology of Behavior" at the Parker House Hotel in Boston. The purpose of the course was to provide an understanding of the anatomical and physiological mechanisms of behavioral disorders in adults and children.

Mesulam and Sandra Weintraub, PhD, behavioral neurology, published "Developmental Learning Disabilities of the Right Hemisphere: Emotional, Interpersonal, and Cognitive Components" in the 1983 Archives of Neurology.

Robert M. Goldwyn, MD, head of the division of plastic surgery, lectured on "Ethics in the Practice of Plastic Surgery," "Preparation of a Manuscript for Medical Publishing," and "Proper Selection of Patients in Plastic Surgery" at the annual meeting of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons in Dallas.

Dr. Goldwyn, who is editor of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, also has been appointed honorary editor of Palastica Chirurgica (Milan, Italy).

Raj K. Goyal, MD, and Satish Rattan, DVM, gastroenterology, published "Pharmacological differences between neural (inhibitory) and muscle (excitatory) CCK receptors in the cat lower esophageal sphincters" in Gastroenterology.

William Grossman, MD, cardiologist-in-chief, published "Ventricular Wall Stress and the Development of Cardiac Hypertrophy and Failure" with Blase Carbello, MD; Steven Gunther, MD; and Michael Fifer, MD, in Perspectives in Cardiovascular Research, vol. 7 (Raven Press). Dr. Grossman also published "Influence of Cardiac Hypertrophy on Myocardial Compliance" with Beverly Lorrell, MD, cardiology, in Perspectives in Cardiovascular Research, vol. 8 (Raven Press).

Ferris Hall, MD, radiology, has been named president of the New England Roentgen Ray Society for 1983-1984.

Celeste L. Hurley, RN, MS, nurse specialist for quality assurance, was appointed to the Massachusetts Nurses Association Quality Assurance Committee.

Ralph J. Kahana, MD, psychiatry, published "A Miserable Old Age — What Can Therapy Do?" in the Journal of Geriatric Psychotherapy. He also presented the topic "Dynamic Psychotherapy of Older People" at the Council and Business Meeting of the Western Massachusetts Psychiatric Society, Amherst, MA.

Lissa R. Kapust, MSW, social service and behavioral neurology, presented "Transitions: Coping with Change" at the fifth annual conference of the Adaptive Environments Center and was keynote speaker at the Lynn Hospital Health Fair. Her topic was "Living with Dementia: The Ongoing Funeral."

James Kelly, MD; Marshall Strome, MD; and Marvin P. Fried, MD; otolaryngology, presented "Office Practice of Primary Care Medicine" at a primary care medicine course in Boston. Doctors Kelly and Strome published "Development of Speech Audiometric Materials for Native Spanish-Speaking Adults" in the Journal of International Audiology with Howard Zubick, PhD, of Brigham and Women's Hospital. Dr. Strome presented "Choanal Atresia and Laryngotracheal Reconstruction" as visiting professor of otolaryngology at five hospitals in the People's Republic of China.

Henry Klapholz, MD, obstetrics and gynecology, conducted the workshops "Antepartum Assessment of the High-Risk Pregnancy" and "Premature Labor — Causes and Treatment" at the Hamot Medical Center in Erie, Pennsylvania.

Lester Klein, MD, urology, has been elected president of the New England section of the American Urological Association for 1983-1984.

Kathryn Kris, MD, psychiatry, published "A Seventy Year Follow-up of a Learning Disability: The Case of Fanny Burney" in the Psychoanalytic Study of the Child (vol. 38, 1983). Dr. Kris presented "Stress and Anxiety of the Dental Student" to the American Associated Dental Schools in New England.

J. Antony Lloyd, MA, vice president for public affairs, spoke on "Communicating PR Needs with Top Management" before a national professional development seminar sponsored by the Boston University School of Public Communication and the New England Chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

Lloyd, Elizabeth M. Strock, associate director, and Ruth Freiman, public affairs, were honored by the Association of American Medical Colleges' Group on Public Affairs for their program of publicity to support THE PROJECT. They were presented with a plaque at AAMC's annual conference.

Steven E. Locke, MD, psychiatry, was elected 1983 president of the Massachusetts Biofeedback Society and appointed to the scientific advisory board for the Institute for the Advancement of Health. Dr. Locke also was elected to the Council of the American Psychosomatic Society.

Susan Love, MD, surgery, presented "Controversies on Breast Lumps" at the annual dinner of the Massachusetts Medical Society's Charles River Division.

Brenda McKonly, RN, nursing, has authored and directed the film Traffic Patterns in the Surgical Suite.

David Miller, MD, ophthalmology, published Sodium Hyaluronate: A Guide to Its Use in Ophthalmology (John Wiley) with Robert Stegmann, MD.

Helaine Miller, vice president for development, led a workshop for Women in Development on entry-level positions in development entitled "I've just begun a new career, what do I do next?" at Babson College.

Kathleen F. Morgan, PhD, medicine, has been awarded an Established Investigatorship of the American Heart Association for a five-year period beginning July, 1984.

Susan Norman, RN, nursing, presented a paper entitled "Evaluation of Tracheotomy for Severe Obstructive Sleep Apnea Syndrome" before the International Conference of Sleep in Relation to Disease. Co-authors of the paper are James Kelly, MD, otolaryngology, and T. Scott Johnson, MD, co-director of the sleep lab.

Mitchell T. Rabkin, MD, president, was asked to participate in a task force of the Department of Health and Hospitals. The task force is concerned with ensuring Boston residents access to health care regardless of their payer class or ability to pay.

Dr. Rabkin was the principal speaker at the winter commencement of Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Sciences and was awarded an honorary doctor of science in pharmacy.

Dr. Rabkin also was the recipient of an honorary doctor of science degree from Brandeis University.

Robert H. Resnick, MD, medicine, co-authored the paper "Ethanol, Thyroid Hormones, and Acute Liver Injury" in Hepatology. He also has published a chapter in Howard Conn's Current Therapy (W.B. Saunders, Philadelphia, 1983) on managment of cirrhosis.

Rabbi Bard Named Chaplain

Rabbi Terry Ross Bard, rabbi of Congregation Shalom in Chelmsford, has been named chaplain of Beth Israel Hospital. His responsibilities include the pastoral care program for all patients in the Harvard teaching hospital. This position was held since 1971 by Rabbi Dr. Hyman R. Friedman, who retired in December 1983.

Rabbi Bard is president of the Association of Mental Health Clergy and has served as director of the department of pastoral care and education at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center. He was president of the Massachusetts Board of Rabbis from 1980 to 1982 and has been a member of the Judaism and Health Committee of the Conference of American Rabbis . He also has served as a member of the Harvard School of Public Health Committee on the Use of Human Subjects in Research and has been appointed to the Harvard Medical School/ Harvard Dental School Committee on Human Studies.

Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, noted, "Rabbi Bard comes to us with extensive administrative and pastoral experience, in addition to the other professional qualifications of a rabbi. He also has demonstrated a solid commitment to both the Jewish and larger communities. His impressive skills and experience in a clinical setting will be particularly important in this era of highly sophisticated medical technology which increasingly raises a growing variety and complexity of ethical and religious issues."

Rabbi Bard holds an AB degree from Brown University. He completed his rabbinical studies at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was ordained in 1971.

Rabbi Bard holds memberships in many professional organizations, including the Association of Clinical Pastoral Education and the American Academy of Religion. He has lectured on numerous topics such as ethical and moral issues surrounding resuscitation, religious aspects of psychotherapy, and issues between the religious client and the religious therapist.

Joan B. Mendelsohn, director of the office of community relations at the hospital, said, "Rabbi Bard is a warm and approachable person who understands the complexities of a large teaching hospital. His orientation to pastoral care and his personal style promise to make him a valued colleague on the health care team."

Too Much News? Never.
If you receive more than one copy of Beth Israel News, please forgive us. Although we do our best to eliminate duplications in our mailing, the variety of lists of friends of the hospital in various capacities is such that occasional "multiples" are unavoidable. Such extra copies needn't be wasted, however. Give them to friends or associates who might be interested in the work of our hospital, and turn repetition into revelation. Meanwhile, drop us a note to let us know of the duplication, and we'll do our best to rectify it.
